St. Georgen, April 2010

While offering a new service portal, the manufacturer of time switches Grässlin GmbH serves as a useful platform for their customers including information of operation philosophy, functions and features of the Grässlin product range. The user will find three options on the internet side www.graesslin.de to cover all needs on product information.

The area product training assists the user by itself step by step through the training program. Clearly arranged simulations help to get an overview of all functions and operation navigations of the Grässlin products. The training covers basics, functions, adjustments, programming, technical data, installation and application of various product lines. Depending on the user request the product information can be recalled very quickly and easily at any time and, if requested, be utilized direct on the device.

Regular live-training sessions will take place through this portal. Interested users can learn more about exact date and training contents by looking on the internet site. On application for the training and after filling out the registration sheet the participant will receive further details and access codes by e-mail. The contents of the training will be assigned by phone while parallel visual presentation material will be shown on the PC. Detailed technical information of the wide product range is explained by a consultant and will also answer any questions that might occur.

For any special questions or proposals coming up by the user, the area "individual needs" has been arranged to cover these needs. By using the contact sheet on this site the customer has the chance to get in contact with one of the Grässlin assistance having the opportunity to ask any question or to get a personal training. This area is concluding the tailor made services.
